

Code of Birdwatching Ethics

Bird Observation & Conservation Australia (BOCA) states one of its objectives as being:
"To foster ethical bird observing as a social and individual activity directed to benefit Australian birds."

To help achieve this objective, BOCA has adopted the following code:

birds

❖ The welfare of the birds must always have the highest priority

Do not cause stress to birds or expose them to danger during observation, photography or recording.
Do not approach too closely or interfere with their natural behaviour. Try not to put resting birds to flight.

❖ Adjust your behaviour to the location Walk slowly, speak quietly, drive cautiously.

❖ Approach nests carefully and do not stay nearby for long periods

Your visit may assist predators to find eggs or young & your continued presence may drive the parents away.

❖ Do not harass birds by repeated disturbance

Accept good distant views of a bird rather than risk causing stress through approaching too closely or putting them to flight. Excessive spotlighting, or repeated playback or imitation of calls can cause stress. Shining spotlights or laser lights directly into bird's eyes is unacceptable. Beating bushes or dragging ropes to flush birds is inappropriate.

habitat

❖ Keep habitat disturbance to a minimum

Where possible, walk or drive on formed roads, tracks and paths to minimise disturbance to bird habitat and to the birds. Avoid disturbance around nests, display areas and roost sites.

❖ Consider the consequences of attracting birds

Providing food, water or artificial nest hollows can be beneficial, but may, in some situations, expose birds to predation.

❖ Respect the rights of landholders

Always obtain permission to enter their land. Always leave gates as you found them & do not damage property.

❖ Follow all rules, laws & regulations governing public areas

❖ In groups, respect the rights of others

- Raising your voice or pointing excitedly may cause the bird to fly away or spoil the sighting for others.
- Consider whether you are blocking other observers and if so, when you have seen the bird, move away to make room for them.
- Be helpful to beginners and always try to encourage others to appreciate birds.
- On group outings, the group leader must accept responsibility for enforcing the BOCA Code of Birding Ethics.
- The leader must take into account the cumulative effect of a number of people approaching a bird.

remember

All bird observers will be judged by your actions!

Your Tenterfield Birdwatching Guide

Welcome to Tenterfield Shire

We are on the top end of the New England Tablelands of New South Wales. The Shire reaches onto the lowlands of the Clarence River to the east and the Beardy River to the west. This mix of eastern lowlands, sub-alpine (over 1600m) sub-tropical & warm temperate rainforest and dry western woodlands provide many habitats.

Explanation

This Guide has been compiled to allow serious or novice birdwatchers to plan their visit.

It covers some public reserves and includes private land. Public land will always be accessible but private properties need to be contacted before entry. Phone numbers are given. Almost all of these properties have accommodation (see advertisements) and welcome birdwatchers.

The areas surveyed have been broken up into North, East (Timbarra only), Tenterfield and West. Each area has been further divided into reserves or properties and each of these sightings has been recorded as being seen in summer (red dot), or winter (blue dot) or both.

Using this unique guide it is possible to plan your visit around the birds or the environment you wish to see, the best time to see them and the appropriate place to stay.

These records were taken over a two year period and are not absolute. Please contact the Tenterfield Visitor Information Centre or your accommodation with any further sightings together with your name, address, phone number, details of the bird, location and date for our records.
